SKILLS

Stephanie has over 20 years of experience in the architecture and design profession managing the flow of product and technical information coming into firms through their resource libraries, while also influencing design on a diverse range of commercial projects. She is regarded by colleagues, clients and vendors for her professional network, expertise and knowledge about interior and architectural products, and the process by which they are considered and procured for projects.

She recently founded resource + design, a knowledge forward consultancy practice, to connect people, products and solutions. The practice is dedicated to providing product expertise and due diligence for architecture and design professionals, to champion brands for manufacturers and educate the professional and consumer markets.

Stephanie has overseen the daily operations of resource libraries and assisted teams globally to research and recommend products, furniture, finishes, innovative materials, solutions and sustainable resources. While at Gensler, she was the Northeast Regional Resource Director managing and mentoring library staff in New York, New Jersey, Boston and Costa Rica supporting over 700 employees. In addition, she streamlined the research process, by effectively documenting and cataloging resources for ease of reference and retrieval. Stephanie has been a liaison for both the staff and vendor community establishing relationships with manufacturers to source products, conduct vendor meetings and maintain current resources for over 2,000 suppliers while also developing educational opportunities for staff.

Stephanie has not only been in a position to recommend products, but also to select and specify as a Certified Interior Designer and a LEED AP ID+C professional. With an FF&E design expertise she has been responsible for the selection, documentation and implementation of furniture and finishes on projects ranging from 1,500 to 1,000,000 square feet. Stephanie's career has been focused on commercial design working on projects in various markets including corporate, institutional, retail and hospitality, allowing her to understand the process by which products are considered for different typologies and the due diligence involved with the appropriate selection of resources.

While at IA she developed submissions for The Port Authority of NY & NJ, documenting fire rating tests for all specified materials for Fortune 500 clients designing offices in The World Trade Center. During her tenure at Ennead, she last coordinated the FF&E effort for the Metropolitan Opera VIP Patron Lobby renovation and supported the development of material palettes and furniture standards for Brown University's School of Professional Studies and an annex for The Public Theater in New York City.

Stephanie has also led internal committees to develop initiatives and standards on a firmwide level to support staff when selecting and documenting furniture and interior finishes to implement best practices of a firm.

In addition to Stephanie's knowledge, she has a strong sense of organization, communication and interpersonal skills to help her effectively assist clients and interact with internal staff. She has to be extremely organized, able to successfully interact with multiple individuals, and effectively communicate in order to add value on a firmwide level.
